

Academic links

London South Bank University

London South Bank University The Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital has a history of more than sixty years of providing postregistration orthopaedic nurse education. Orthopaedic nursing was the first post registration course to be developed by the nursing profession and due to the ageing population is the fastest growing speciality in the Health Service.

The Nurse Education Department at the Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital forms part of the Faculty of Health of South Bank University that provides local, national and international education at Diploma and Degree level.

The Royal National Orthopaedic Hospital and South Bank University have a close relationship working together to provide high quality clinical experience and academic support for nurses wishing to further their professional education.

Other information on RNOH academic links can be found on the UCL Institute of Orthopaedics and Musculoskeletal Science \(IOMS\).

For more information: Telephone: 020 8909 5850.